

12-Year-Old Italian Girl Stabbed By Muslim Classmate For Wearing A Crucifix

Here.

The Muslim classmate had recently arrived from Senegal, and had been told since childhood about how dangerous and evil Christians were, so threatening this Italian classmate over several days, and then finally stabbing her in the back for wearing that crucifix, had to be – according to some clerics and others quoted – “understood” and, furthermore, should not be “instrumentalized” – that is “exploited” by those who, alarmed by the effects on the natives of the invasive species of Islam, might actually point to this as one more example of the dangers of Islam. We are asked to believe instead that this is merely the same kind of schoolyard clash that happens all the time, that is similar to what children do all over the place. Do they? Or does the stabbing of an Italian girl by a Muslim from Senegal, in a school in Italy, in the context of so many attacks by Muslims on non-Muslims everywhere in the world, suggest that the immigration policy of the Western world needs immediately to be tightened?
