

Ahmadiyya Muslim lorry: Stop WW3

Seen in Central London yesterday. An advertising lorry employed by the Ahmadiyya Muslim Community to warn of the coming World War III.

I don't know what to make of the Ahmadiyya. I have never knowingly met or spoken with one. That they are persecuted in almost every Muslim country to an extent worse than Christians and Jews are persecuted (infidels are ignorant. People who know the Koran and call themselves Muslim should know better, seems to be the rationale) engages sympathy. That whenever an Islamic group is shown in the press to be doing something good (selling poppies, cleaning up litter) it is frequently an Ahmadyya mosque. Is this genuine or high velocity taqiya?

That they have moved on from the recitation of Mohammed to revere the teaching of Mirza Ghulam Ahmad suggests a willingness to grow. That they still revere Mohammed as Allah's messenger makes me hold back due to his flaws as an example to follow.

They are not the only people who feel in their bones that Civil unrest which is happening (but played down) in Europe may erupt in a series of Civil wars. And they have more experience of orthodox Islamic governance than most. Interesting times.
