

Amid a Resurgent Jihad, New York Times' Nicholas Kristof Thinks US Military Aid to Israel Should Be Cut

by Hugh Fitzgerald

More than 1,700 rockets have been launched at Israeli civilians from Gaza by the terrorist group Hamas. in the first five days of the latest conflict. Meanwhile, mobs of marauding Arabs have been burning Jewish homes, shops, and synagogues in Lod and a half-dozen other mixed (Arab and Jew) cities inside Israel. The Israelis, quite reasonably, feel besieged, with all those rockets that keep coming in, and with the Israeli Arab mobs revealing the Enemy Within. Is this the time to be cutting our aid to Israel, our only sure ally between Europe and Japan? Nicholas Kristof thinks so. His latest vaporings are discussed here: "New York Times Columnist Kristof Questions 'Vast Sums' of US Military Aid to Israel," by Ira

Stoll, Jihad Watch.
