A Great Prince and Princess & Apollo

by Michael Shindler (November 2022)

Ida Rubinstein, Romaine Brooks, 1917

A Great Prince and Princess

A great prince and princess

Spied each other from opposite sides of a ballroom

And each was a sight to see

With black-white eyes and black-white hair.

In the center, they approached Amid an extraordinary waltz

As in a game of chess A move from doom Players talk blithely And vacate their square.

Yes, for all their faults, In the center, they approached.

Apollo

Apollo when walking through an antique valley Did not allow his gaze to wander Toward whosoever praised him.

Indeed, it was a beautiful valley And all who lived there loved him.

But in spite of their love His gaze was fixed elsewhere, Beyond the valley, At a dim point Above.
