

The Aftermath, a Final Poem for Alice

by G. Tod Slone (April 2019)

The Dead Mother, Edvard Munch, 1893

Twass a nice birthday at one hundred twass not so at one hundred and one Plenty of cake, wine, and the twins then the get-togethers were no more

No more telephone calls from Alice Tod, do you want some chicken soup?

don't forget to bring your own pot!

Now and then I was able to say hi walking over with her son Rob there she was supine, though sat up thin as a rail, ah, but she recognized me

And then a week of morphine and on New Year's Eve she passed and then the aftermath

Alice was now gone

And the big truck from New Bedford already at her house to take away the special hospice bed

And then, and then what to do with all her things, so many papers (she'd saved everything and anything) into the garbage, down to the dump and who gets this, and who gets that and the relatives down from Merrimack where once upon a time Alice on a farm and the phone calls to inform the world of her demise, departure, and disappearance and her grand-daughter, Tracy, sad, and her daughter-in-law, Joanne, no longer mad

And Alice already incinerated—ashes to ashes soon to be shipped to Ontario It had been quite some time now since I'd eaten her tasty oatmeal cookies, sipped tea with her, cleaned her windows, hosed down her screens, raked up her leaves, and pruned her beloved rose bushes (I used to have so many roses up in Canada, she'd said with a touch of nostalgia)

And we come, we go; and Alice came, Alice went . . .

«Previous Article Table of Contents Next Article»

G. Tod Slone, PhD, lives on Cape Cod, where he was permanently banned in 2012 without warning or due process from Sturgis Library, one of the very oldest in the country. His civil rights are being denied today because he is not permitted to attend any cultural or political events held at his neighborhood library. The only stated reason for the banning was “for the safety of the staff and public.” He has no criminal record at all and has never made a threat. His real crime was that he challenged, in writing, the library’s “collection development” mission that stated “libraries should provide materials and information presenting all points of view.” His point of view was somehow not part of “all points of view.” He is a dissident poet/writer/cartoonist and editor of The American Dissident.

Follow NER on Twitter @NERIconoclast