

Autistic woman 'pimped out' in care scandal

From Daily Mail and With the court's approval, an Islamic wedding took place in the spring of last year, followed by a civil ceremony with staff from Engage Support, the company paid by Manchester council to care for the woman, acting as bridesmaids. After the marriage, care workers continued to look after the woman when her husband was not at home.

another article with more information

(Engage Support is) A small company with 22 employees, it specialises in services for "young people and adults with autism and associated learning disabilities". Its owner is Paul Crowther, 49, who is also its director of health and social care.