

Ayaan Hirsi Ali is too kind

A few days before the UK General Election, Ayann Hirsi Ali hoped for a Conservative victory. From cut it loose.

Labour does not appear to have won enough of the Muslim vote to make up the numbers, despite Ed Miliband's toadying promise to make "Islamophobia" a "hate crime". Why was this? From toads to elephants in rooms to apes and pigs, I suspect that his Jewishness had something to do with it. It doesn't matter that Miliband is an atheist, anymore than it would have mattered to Hitler.,

I am pleased to see a Tory majority – it is the least worst outcome. Unshackled from the Liberal Democrats, Cameron is free to tackle monstrosities such as the Human Rights Act and the EU. I certainly trust him on the economy. If he continues to clamp down on the vastly over-generous welfare benefits, jihadists and their enablers may see their funding cut off. But as to his tackling Islam directly, sorry Ms Hirsi Ali, it is you who don't get it.
