Being a Candidate can be Blissful

by Reg Green

As we search for clues on what the presidential candidates really think, rather than what they think we want them to think, let's keep a lookout for a quality that Jimmy Breslin, the legendary newspaper columnist, found in a candidate in a presidential race many years ago: what he admired in him, he said, was the way he stood up for his ignorance.