

Belgium hunts terror ring over 'fake police' plot

The ongoing search follows the discovery of a stash of weapons in a Brussels suburb, including Kalashnikov assault rifles, smaller firearms, ammunition, bullet proof vests, detonators, a blue police beacon and security and police uniforms. The items found in a lock-up garage sparked concern that potential attackers could have been plotting to pose as police and other officials.

Police charged two brothers of a convicted jihadist on Wednesday but revealed on Thursday they are looking for further members of a possible terror cell. Belgian nationals Akim and Khalid Saouti, who were among four people detained in overnight raids on Tuesday, are believed to be the brothers of Said Saouti, a member of the Kamikaze Riders motorcycle club. The Kamikaze club is a Moroccan outfit, with form for jihadist connections. Why Hells Angels Europe have tolerated them I don't know.

They were charged on Wednesday with belonging to a "terrorist group" and suspected of planning an attack.

Last year, Said was jailed for recruiting people to jihadist organisations and supporting IS on social media.

A spokesman for prosecutors had said earlier that the raids were "directly linked" to members of the Kamikaze Riders, not to the investigation into the Paris and Brussels attacks.
