

Britain not treating incident at military base as terrorism at this stage – source

Update at 6.45pm from LONDON \(Reuters\) – Britain is not treating an incident at a British military base on Monday as terrorism-related at this stage, a Western security source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, told Reuters.

U.S. military personnel fired shots as they stopped a man who tried to force his way into Mildenhall Royal Air Force base. Suffolk police force is taking the lead on the incident and that specialist anti-terrorism officers were not immediately involved.