

Captain Sir Tom Moore: Landmarks lit up to say farewell ahead of Clap for Tom at 6pm public buildings will be lit up for a second night.

A woman plays the violin in Piccadilly Circus in tribute

Millwall football team played a match last night. Millwall are noted for declining to join in with the kneel for BLM which is common in English football at the moment. Last night they held a minutes applause in honour of Captain Sir Tom.

It seems strange that I feel sad at the passing of a man I never knew, who I had never heard of until this time last year. But it's been a strange year and looks set to be equally trying to come. And Capt. Tom seemed to symbolise the generation of my parents, that we call our finest generation, most of whom have passed.

In 2008 I attended a service in Whitehall called last