

Catching The Killers Is Trivial – Making People Understand Qur'an And Sunnah More Important

Yes, may the police in France catch these particular killers, and ideally, kill them on the spot (trials are such a waste of money and time). No more idiotic Guantanamo either. But that's not the end, that's the beginning. Islam itself, and its adherents, must be put on trial, must be cross-examined. The notion that countries in the West have some kind of need to show Muslims we are willing to continue to pretend that Islam is not what it is, and that those who, knowing what it is, still continue to identify as Muslims (which means they have declared their adherence to the Jihad, that is the permanent war, conducted by many different means, some of them new to this century, on all non-Muslims), and thereby can reasonably be considered to constitute a permanent threat to the wellbeing of all non-Muslims, has to stop. Mock those who, like Merkel and Kerry and Obama and Cameron, try to dampen anti-Islam sentiment, sentiment exhibited not by "far-right extremists" and not by those who are "anti-immigrant" but by those who, through their powers of intellect and observation, have realized that what Islam inculcates is dangerous, that the texts of Islam cannot change and will not somehow be "reformed," and that, at the very least, all immigration by Muslims should be halted, all measures taken to make the conduct of Muslim easier be ended (for example, ban whenever possible, for whatever reason seems to work, halal food, punto e basta), and ideally, those measures, if relentless, and accompanied by a denial of benefits (there are ways to do this), and private boycotts of Muslim goods and services (for example, none of this fashionable and reprehensible buying lamb sandwiches at “the Halal Guys” carts in New York, or going to curry shops in England, or couscouseries in France, unless owned and staffed by non-Muslims). Do not hire apologists for Islam to teach about Islam or the history of “Islam and the West” where the victimization and misinformation and resentment will merely weaken Western resolve; do not hire Muslims because their mere presence – in an academic department, at a school, at a law firm – will simply inhibit truthful and free conversation about Islam. Do what you can, in your own determined private boycott – you need only engage in it, not necessarily announce it in a way that will make you subject to idiotic criticism or worse. Do this and encourage those whom you have reason to believe have seen, or are starting to see, the light.
