

Epping – a fourth protest

I watched the AY Audit live stream again at intervals during this evening, plus X posts. Earlier protests here

This is GB News

Dozens of protesters have marched on a suspected migrant hotel in Essex in a fourth day of action after an asylum seeker was charged with sexual assault.

One of the protesters has been arrested, police said, as more than 100 demonstrators gathered on Sunday evening. More than 100 in the end.

Protesters were heard chanting “save our kids”, with some setting off flares in blue and red, while others held signs which read “deport foreign criminals”, “we go home when they go back” and “defend our girls”.

Bottles and smoke flares were thrown towards police vans blocking the entrance to the hotel.

It started very peaceful. Nick Tenconi, leader of UKIP was one of the speakers.

This is a brilliant idea to have the women at the front. The media focus on blokes for their front pages to push the violence angle. They’ll struggle to spin this.

I'm here in Epping at The Bell Hotel and there's well over a thousand people peacefully protesting right now, these women have a powerful message.

No face masks that I can see either.

After dark it got a bit livelier and a dispersal order took effect about 20 minutes ago. AY's last live stream message was that he was going to buy something to eat on his way home.

There were rumours that Stand up To Racism/Unite Against Fascism /Antifa were being bused in from Theydon Bois; this seemed unlikely and they didn't put in an appearance, or not that either of us (me and husband, we can cover a lot of ground between us) hear reported.

Asylum seekers (men) were seen coming and going from the hotel today, so it is still operating

There was a much bigger police presence than on Thursday; today Essex Police were supported by Hertfordshire Police (only 5 miles away across the River Lea) and Norfolk Police (from a lot further away!)

The next scheduled protest is this coming Thursday the 24th

Within the last hour Tommy Robinson has announced that he intends to join the protest on Sunday 27th and Laurence Fox might be with him. This could get very interesting.
