

How About a Juicy Conspiracy Theory?

By Armando Simón

I have a conspiracy theory for you. It's a doozy.

Let's start with how leftists are so self-delusional. Anyone who has been paying attention will realize this fact as evidenced by the following: men who put on a dress and call themselves women really are women, doing away with fossil fuels will save civilization, free speech consists of censoring "hate speech", your free speech is violence while our violence is free speech, blacks burning down neighborhoods and looting stores are mostly peaceful protests, covid vaccines prevent contagion, wearing face masks will prevent contagion, saving democracy consists in electoral fraud, censorship, and persecuting political opponents, etc.

This is not hypocrisy it is sincerely (and stupidly) delusional.

For the past four years, the media hivemind has deluded itself by ignoring Biden was becoming increasingly debilitated mentally, even when they covered his speeches (which they made sure not to broadcast). His staff was likewise delusional. The fact that in press conferences they had to submit their questions ahead of time and he was reading the answers from the podium made no impression on minds that were set in concrete in not criticizing him. And his conversation and behavior with other political elites also made no impression on the latter.

The debate with Trump a few months back blew their delusions clear out of the water and it was there for all to see, the whole nation, nay the whole world saw it. There was no censoring it. Reality suddenly hit the elites in the face, and they went into panic mode. Biden was going to lose in the election to Trump, that evil man who was going to reverse the destruction of America.

Discussions were rampant as to his resigning and who would replace him. Calls for him to resign came from his allies.

Biden and his staff still remained delusional and insisted that during the debate he had had a bad night and to assure everyone he allowed to be interviewed by a squirrel of a journalist (or, I should say propagandist), where instead of reassuring his side he confirmed his mental status. More panic. Same with a subsequent speech he made.

Asked if there was any reason for him to step aside—and here is the key—he blithely stated it would be for medical reasons.

Discussions continued behind closed doors as to his resigning and who would replace him. And the pressure by the elites for him to resign intensified, both publicly and privately, to be replaced by someone of their choosing (not the voters).

An assassination attempt was then made on Trump, facilitated by the Deep State. So many flaws took place in safeguarding him that no one could possibly be that stupid. It was deliberate. Cheatle has been evasive since and has the look of a cornered rat. Either she is afraid that she will ultimately be the fall guy for attempted murder, or is worried that the people who have assured her they have her back will arrange yet another “suicide.”

The pressure for Biden to resign intensified.

His wife made cryptic warnings that if they went down, they would take a lot of people with them. Apparently, they know nasty secrets, including the things that they themselves helped carry out.

Now, at this point, put yourself in the Biden crime family and their inner circle's mind. First, Hunter is counting on his father giving him a pardon for the crimes that he has been convicted of and of others that he may be tried. Second, they say that yes, he stumbles every once in a while, but it's minor, he still has a few good years ahead of him during which times they can continue getting rich and exercise power and, most importantly, finish the destruction of America.

Plus, he's a stubborn old fart. He doesn't want to go.

He went to Las Vegas for a fundraiser. A leak came out that he would resign on Saturday. Saturday came and went. He was reportedly sick with covid, despite having received numerous injections of the "flawless" vaccine. Then, he was taken somewhere, not sure where. And, on Sunday, a message finally came out that he had decided to, not resign but rather not to seek re-election. Not in person, but by message. Except the signature seems off. And it's not even in White House stationery. And he has not been seen since.

It reminds me of the coup against Gorbachev.
