

Hypocrisy on full display in Virginia's Justice High School

by Lev Tsitrin

What struck me when I read about a codified by Congress and hence, is a law; altering the pledge is hardly legal. Ms. Omeish apparently did not intervene in this display of illegality, showing either her ignorance, or hypocrisy (and certainly, the wilful disrespect for the country.) “Allah” simply means “God” in Arabic, so why this odd substitution that narrowed the meaning of the word? Why not say “God” – which is acceptable to all, unless one’s allegiance is really only to “ummah,” the world-wide community of Moslems, and not to the United States? Was that a Freudian slip displaying to all the true object of Ms. Omeish’s patriotism?

“The world may try to quiet you by deciding for you what’s cool, what’s weird, what is or isn’t objective. It may try to convince you that what you hold dear is too different to be accepted. You are walking into a world that will be uncomfortable when you seek to cause good trouble. And that may seek to intimidate you or make you think the truth is controversial," Ms. Omeish told the students. And she likely believes that she was causing "good trouble" by her speech – and even that she was telling "the truth." In truth, to do justice to Ms. Omeish's oration at the Justice High School in which the Islamist kettle was calling the American pot black, it should be just laughed off.
