

Ivan Rioufol On The Civil War, The Menace Of Islam, And Those Who Keep Averting Their Eyes

He does not come out straightforwardly against Islam tout court, Islam of Qur'an and Sunnah. He comes out against "islamisme," and "djidhadisme" and "Islam politique." But I take him to mean, in the end, Islam. And when he demands that Muslims, or those who continue to call themselves Muslims, come out to demonstrate clearly against those who kill those who mock Muhammad or Islam, he may know that this demand will not be met, can't be met, because millions of Muslims in France are not outraged at all, but merely concerned to say just enough, or have their lying leaders – like Amar Lasfal on French television tonight – say just enough to satisfy the weak-minded and the unwary and the insufficiently well-prepared.

Rioufol's article here.

No one in the Western world, not in France, not in the United Kingdom, not in Germany, not in the United States, need apologize in the slightest for being anti-Islam, and working to weaken its influence and power, and the power and influence and presence of Muslims, a presence permanently disruptive and dangerous, everywhere in the West.