

Let Us Praise Ordinary Men

by Theodore Dalrymple (May 2015)

Our town has a lovely cemetery. Victorian furnishings may have been abominable, but the Victorians did the dead proud: we cannot come near them in funerary taste. Modern burials seem designed to make cremation attractive, at least aesthetically-speaking. more>>>