

London election results live: Sadiq Khan is named capital's new mayor

errorist-supporting (in)human rights lawyer is not the latest in a chain of honourable and illustrious men. Having said that, he will have a certain amount of power, a substantial budget and responsibilities which he can use 'wisely'.

The furore over the Labour party's anti-semitism doesn't seem to have affected voting. I didn't expect it to. Those people who would be shocked and dismayed at Labour's prejudice stopped voting for Labour some time ago. There are too many people in the electoral demographic of London to whom anti-semitism and or anti-zionism/anti-Israel is a Good Thing.

Meanwhile indigenous Londoners who live on the edges of Greater London (what during Boris Johnson's campaign a few years ago was called the doughnut) still voted for Zac Goldsmith. And we do not yet know the final result as to how much the vote was affected by the Essex continue to support UKIP.

twitter account. Even his promo snaps are segregated and lets not mention his public meetings.

Sadiq Khan MP on Twitter: "Good to be back at Kingston mosque for Friday prayers and to meet with local residents today