

London Today Continued

Compare and contrast yesterday numerous anti-Trump demonstrations (just in London – so as to compare like with like – Scotland really is another country, and I'm never sure about Sheffield) with today Welcome Trump and Free Tommy Yesterday numerous groups descended on several locations in central London. The according to the Metropolitan Police “due to concerns of serious public disorder and disruption to the community.”

the following conditions apply to the procession relating to 'Welcome Trump' and the 'Free Tommy Robinson' protest.

Any procession must:

- The march must form up and start at Temple Place.
- The form up must not commence before 13:00hrs.
- Any procession must commence between 13:00hrs and 14:00hrs.
- The route of the procession must follow the following route: Temple Place, Embankment, Northumberland Avenue, Whitehall Place and Whitehall.

Any other march that is associated with 'Welcome Trump' and 'Free Tommy Robinson' cause will contravene the Section 12 Public Order Act conditions.

So limited in time, and limited in range.

The women's march was notable for staggerinvaginas. Four letter words I wouldn't have dared said in front of my late mother. Outside St Margarets church what Sargon of Akkad described as inflatable sex doll and an inflatable piglet; the doll's face superimposed with the face of Sadiq Khan. The last I heard the police had ordered her to deflate said doll, under threat of arrest. Did somebody say one rule for one?

From what I can see of their twitter feed Hope not Hate are not enamoured of the speakers.

Filip de Winter from Vlams Belang just spoke about the “need to organise the resistance to prevent the islamic hostile takeover of the west”.

Guardian (the very left leaning, but not quite as far left as the Independent newspaper) the Welcome Trump march was at short notice forbidden to march from Nine Elms but individuals joined the Free Tommy rally as individuals. Thousands of individuals. There are some photographs. This is the best, I think.

I hope to have accounts and photographs from those who were there later, or maybe tomorrow.
