

Mohammad Hossein, Student AT The University Of Illinois, Inspired By Fifty Shades Of Grey

Here.

Or, if you want more, here.

And what are the names of the other books that have inspired Mohammad Hossein, a freshman at the University of Illinois who is described as a “student leader,” and his attitude, and behavior, toward women? Qur’an? Hadith? Sira?

And if he is indeed a “student leader,” whom, what groups exactly, does he – or did he – lead? He was only a freshman. One of the stories – to which I didn’t bother to give a link – includes this:

“The judge was taken aback after Hossain’s lawyer, assistant Cook County public defender Sandra Bennewitz, said Hossain had been involved with several UIC leadership programs, was a student ambassador to the alumni association and was on the triathlon team.”

Was he a “student ambassador” to alumni in general? To Muslim alumni? What was the nature of those “leadership programs” with which he was “involved”? Anything to do with his background, in any way? What more piquant details will come out?

Youth wants to know.
