

More on the Trump Trial

By William Corden

Readers just have to watch this podcast by Alan Dershowitz (who is NOT a Trump supporter by the way).

He was allowed to remain in the courtroom while Judge Merchan tore a strip off witness Costello and gives us a 3D picture of the bias in this trail. He centers on the mainstream media outlets' derelict reporting on the proceedings and highlights the stretches the New York DOJ have taken to try and hang a verdict on President Trump.

He highlights the innumerable mistakes in procedure that the judge has made and yet that doesn't bother the MSM one iota.

It has been, from the outset, a revenge show trial and even with the flimsiest of evidence, most of it hearsay and fabrications, I wouldn't be surprised to see a guilty verdict conjured up by some backroom shenanigans.

It's been the same throughout history, if you disagree with the people in power, they'll find a way to nail you, but occasionally someone surfaces who can't be stopped and I think (or rather, I hope) they've met their match with Donald.

Here's the site for the podcast , for once a logical analysis of what's going on. The justice system has indeed been weaponized.
