

Muslim Students All Over France Refuse To Observe The Minute Of Silence

Here.

One of them threatened to use a “kalash(nikov)” on his teacher: «Je te bute à la kalach», a lancé à Lille un élève de quatrième à son enseignante, pendant cette minute de silence.” Teachers testified that they often didn’t even dare ask for the students to observe that minute of silence in places where “religious tensions” were “vives.” In other words, the minute of silence for those murdered in an attack that we all know had nothing to do with Islam – as Cameron told us that the butchering of Lee Rigby in May 2013 had nothing to do with Islam, or as Obama and Kerry have assured us that the massacres and enslavement of Yazidis, and mass killings of Christians, have nothing to do with Islam—were not going to be observed, and they were not going to let others observe in the same classroom, or school (imagine if you were a non-Muslim student in a class where there were many Muslims, and what that would do to your speaking out in class about all kinds of things), is for some reason something Muslim students did not want to participate in, and because the cunning and sinister clerics who have been careful to publicly denounce this or that, and of course are going to show up for this weekend’s march, did not think of letting the word get out to the Muslim students who were free to express their real views, and by refusing to participate in the minute of silence or intimidating teachers from even proposing such a thing, told you all you need to know about the Muslims of France.