

Nonie Darwish required protection at Georgetown University lecture

From the "Wholly Different: Why I Chose Biblical Values Over Islamic Values." She was the guest of the school's College Republicans and her address, "Women in Sharia: A conversation with Nonie Darwish," was sponsored by the Clare Boothe Luce Policy Institute.

Clare Boothe Luce Policy Institute President Michelle Easton told Secrets, "This is a woman who spent 30 years living under Sharia law in Cairo and Gaza before finally escaping to America—only for some to attempt to oppress and silence her in the 'land of the free.' Why should ANY ideology be above criticism? Nonie has fatwas on her head in over 50 countries—countries that, if Nonie were to set foot, have an Islamic duty (under Sharia law) to imprison and behead Nonie. Why should her criticism of sharia law and the Islamic values that have endangered her very life be met with protests? Why are we not allowed to question and criticize Islam?"
