

Podesta email leaks from Clinton campaign prove Democrats go low

by Kenneth R. Timmerman

Hillary Clinton has "do no harm."

She and her advisors apparently think she can coast to victory and let her surrogates do all the heavy lifting. And it's true: Clinton has a lot of help, not only from the Obamas but from the national media and the establishment elites.

But with the daily dump from Wikileaks of the Podesta emails now in on a strategy to paint Donald Trump as "dangerous and bigoted."

We also know thanks to the Podesta emails that the Clinton campaign regularly was tipped off by sources at the Justice Department into the FBI investigation into her private email server. (Brian Fallon, who forwarded with the sole purpose of undermining the Church – or as the campaign called it, provoking a "Catholic Spring" revolt against Church doctrines on same sex marriage and abortion.

The emails show that during her 2008 primary campaign against Barack Obama, Mrs. Clinton's advisors emails from Sid Blumenthal relating to the Benghazi attacks were destroyed after receiving a subpoena from the Benghazi Select committee for those same emails. They also show her staff conspiring to claimed he didn't even know Clinton's private email address!

Why in the world would Clinton want to discuss such things, or face actual questions about them at a campaign event? And these are just some of the most recent revelations from her presidential campaign server.

There's also the contributed millions of dollars to the Clinton Foundation in the years prior.

Does it get more corrupt than that?

I believe the polls are already showing that Hillary's ghost strategy could very well backfire.

The first The Hill.
