

Sebastian Gorka on the President's tough anti-Jihad comments in Riyadh

Dr. Sebastian Gorka, Deputy Assistant to President Trump.

May 22, 2017 Republished from Dr. Rich Swier eMagazne

Following President Trump very presidential speech at the gathering of the Saudi -led "virtual caliphate," the Organization of Islamic Cooperation, convened by Saudi King Salman, I reached out to President Trump's Deputy Assistant, Dr. Sebastian Gorka.

I referenced the tough talk directed at stopping Jihadists in the middle section of the President's speech that caught the attention of a number of us. It looked very familiar.

Here's the text exchange between us:

Jerry Gordon: Great speech by the President. Perhaps you had a hand in drafting portions of it. If so great work.

Sebastian Gorka:

After 8 years of disastrous terror-enabling Obama politics we can finally talk TRUTH again and have a true leader.

The pivotal remarks from President Donald J. Trump's speech in Saudi Arabia:

"This is battle between Good and Evil."

"There is still much work to be done, including honestly confronting the crisis of Islamist extremism."

"You must drive the terrorists and the extremists out of your places of worship, out of your communities."

"Those strategies have not worked."

"We are going to defeat terrorism and send its wicked ideology into OBLIVION."

Gordon: Looks like the strategy message from your book Defeating Jihad: the Winnable War.