

Sexual exploitation of British Sikh girls by grooming gangs has been 'recklessly ignored' by police due to 'political correctness', claims report

Gangs of predominantly Pakistani men have been grooming British Sikh girls for decades, according to claims in a bombshell report. The study alleges that young Sikh women have been 'targeted' by Muslim men who subjected them to sexual abuse. The report by the Sikh Mediation and Rehabilitation Team charity found that police 'recklessly ignored' complaints – often for reasons of 'political correctness'.

The girls would be snared by 'fashionably dressed adult Pakistani men travelling in flamboyant vehicles to predominantly Sikh dominated areas and schools', it claimed.
