

So Where Are The Muslim Demonstrations?

There are five or six or seven million Muslims in France. Several days have passed since the latest murders of French people by Muslims in France. I've been watching French television nearly non-stop. I know that if there were, anywhere in France, a demonstration by Muslims against the Kouachi murderers, it would be covered endlessly. Do you know of a single demonstration, anywhere in France, organized by, and attended by, Muslims? Do you know of a single demonstration, anywhere in the lands where Muslims dominate, in North Africa, in the Middle East, in South Asia, of Muslims coming together to publicly denounce those who murdered the cartoonists and others at Charlie-Hebdo? Do you know of a single demonstration, anywhere, in any of the countries where Muslims have been allowed in, in Western Europe, or North America, or Australia, and where they have en masse gotten together to express their sympathy and their horror? No? Nowhere? Nowhere in the whole world? Even though we are told there are more than a billion Muslims?

Now think about this. Clearly.
