

Sweden: 15 Year Old Boy Was Stabbed To Death By Arab Migrant Because He Was Protecting Young Girl From Sex Assault

This story is horrible on many levels. Oliver Lane writes in Lithuanian press, Arminas' father said he hadn't even been approached for interviews by the Swedish press after the death of his son, while the same Swedish media rushed to interview the father of the killer. He said in Lithuania the migrant problem was frankly and openly discussed, while in Sweden "everything is being kept hidden".

This week the mainstream left-wing paper Aftonbladet told the Lyrtas: "He was hard-working, cheerful and had a lot of Swedish friends. All loved him... The Swedish press writes that Arminas assaulted the student, but that is not the case... our son saw that boy take the girl. He stopped him and they got into a fight".

Mr. Pileckas said the young boy swore to get his revenge on Arminas for keeping him away from his female classmates, that the school knew about it, and that it was not an isolated incident in Broby, Skåne where they lived. He said of the 'refugees' living in the town: "A Lithuanian girl was attacked a few months ago. They tried to rape her. The police did nothing then... last year the refugees attacked another Lithuanian, who was taking her puppy for a walk".

Rejecting any notion of his son being a bully, he said the school would certainly have told him were taht the case: "the school never hides anything. If he was just late to class, we parents would instantly receive messages”.

The father’s depiction of his son as a good student was confirmed by a 15 year old classmate. Her remarks were
