

Tommy Robinson charged with a terrorism offence

Urban Scoop the News site associated with Tommy and yesterday's patriotic rally has issued a statement consisting of a near transcript of part of a conversation Tommy had with a member of his family concerning his situation so far.

He is now definitely under arrest (while some like Nick Lowles of Hope not Hate were gloating at the arrest others thought it was exaggeration and lets wait for the truth...). Neither the Metropolitan Police \(London\) and Bedfordshire Police (Luton where Tommy lives) are involved with this; therefore it must be one of the Counter Terrorist Units, of which there are 5 within the UK. I reckon CTP South East. It isn't publicly known where he is being held.

A short notice demonstration was held outside Downing Street this afternoon; others with more planning will follow.

Tommy's text is in bold:

What's going on?

I've been arrested under the terrorism act 2000. As someone who 'appears to be' a person who has been concerned in the preparation of acts of terrorism. That's what they nicked me under (their justification).

What are you meant to have done?

Nothing. They have already admitted they know I've done nothing (terrorism related), so I asked why am I here? They interviewed me for six fucking hours. They asked me all sorts of questions about the event (yesterday), about whether I can stop 'the great replacement', about Israel, well what about Palestinians then? I don't have a right to remain silent (under this legislation they have charged me under).

Have you got a solicitor there?

Yes, I have, but it doesn't matter, because under this terrorism legislation I have no right to remain silent. If I do not answer their questions I am breaking the law. They then told me I have to give them the pin code to my phone (so they can access it). I read the literature they gave me, and it said, 'an examining officer may not ask a question where they have reasonable grounds to believe the answers to the questions would require you to disclose or confirm the identity of a source of journalistic information or disclose information that is subject to legal privilege'...

They have charged me for terrorism.

So, what's gonna happen now?

I'm waiting. I'm getting charged so...

Will you get bail?

I hope so.

Just make sure the kids are ok. Make sure the kids don't think their dad, because reading that online, in their minds, that's gonna terrify them.

What that you're a terrorist?

That I've been arrested under the terrorism act. I said to the copper, because I can't remain silent anyway, so I said, these bastards are openly supporting Hamas (a proscribed terrorist organisation) and you don't arrest them, they are flying ISIS flags, and you don't arrest them. You're nicking me for what? You haven't got a crime but you're looking for one.

It's mental. You want to download my phone so you can try to find anything, that's what you're trying to do. Not just that, even if you're not trying to find anything, you want to know what I'm up to. They asked me so many questions about our event yesterday, what are we trying to achieve? When are you next doing it? What are your next plans? What do you think of the government?...

...I've done nothing, I'm being nicked under the terrorism act, this is a total abuse of power. But they are charging me, they are charging me for terrorism.
