

Tavistock Square twelve years on.

To London to meet with friends including those of March for England to lay flowers in Tavistock Square, the site of one of the four London Jihad bombs of 7th July 2005. Chastened to think that to those four sites we have added Woolwich in May where Lee Rigby was murdered, and this year can add Westminster Bridge, London Bridge and Manchester Arena.

From the dedications on the flowers it is no surprise that the families remember, but commercial firms and institutions also have not forgotten. Twelve years on I will say no more here.
