

The Compromise At Evyatar

by Hugh Fitzgerald

The Biden Administration now includes a bunch of what Samuel Beckett, of all people, called “Mr. Buttinskys.” Those buttinskys have been putting pressure on European countries to take back those of their Muslim citizens who had gone off to join ISIS, and now, pretty please, they promise to be good, if only they will be allowed to return. Those countries say no; the Biden Administration tells them to say yes. What business is it of the United States if European countries have the good sense to protect their own people by refusing to allow ISIS supporters to come back? These Jihadis did not go off to summer camp; they knowingly joined a terror state, one where Yazidi girls were raped and their families murdered, where Christians were tortured and killed by Muslim fanatics, propelled by the determination to to destroy the Infidels wherever they might be found. Yet here is the Biden Administration telling the Europeans to put their own citizens in mortal peril by letting those ISIS supporters back in.

Where do those Bidenites get off?

And now the Bidenites are trying to tell Israel what it must do about the West Bank outpost of Evyatar, and condemning Jerusalem for not at once closing it down. The latest on this story is here: “‘Illegal even under Israeli law’: US pans establishment of new Evyatar outpost,” by Jacob Magid, Jihad Watch.
