

The Rahami Family and their Chicken Shop

The Daily Mail has the story about how this poor immigrant family was persecuted.

- Ahmad Rahami filed federal lawsuit claiming cops in Elizabeth, New Jersey subjected his and his family to discrimination and 'selective enforcement'
- Rahimis claimed that police tried to shut down their chicken restaurant too early each night with 'baseless' tickets and summonses
- Ahmad, 28, his father Mohammad Sr, 53, and his brother Mohammad, brought the lawsuit together in 2011
- They said that local residents also racially abused them and said: 'Muslims don't belong here'
- The Rahamis claimed 'discrimination', 'false arrest' and 'abuse of process' that left them suffering distress, embarrassment and damage

They were staying open all night and the neighbors had complained of the noise. The city won the case to make them close at 10PM.
