

The Real Amar Lasfar, The Lying Imam Of Lille, And Caroline Fourest's Response

This smooth taqiyya- talker, who appeared tonight on the French TVmonde, along with Caroline Fourest (who showed in the end she was not impressed with Lasfar), Robert Badinter, and one other whose name I did not note – said that the attack on Charlie-Hebdo was, of course, an attack on all Muslims, all those loyal Muslims who so deeply believe in liberty of the press (and liberty of conscience too?), and who of course were just as appalled as all other loyal French citizens of the Republic. This nonsense was allowed to pass, but finally Caroline Fourest, who wrote a book on Tariq Ramadan (“Frere Tariq”) and was well-versed in Taqiyya and Kitman, listened to Lasfar, who had just claimed, with deep sincerity, that he of course could also say, full-throatedly, that “je suis Charlie” and so could all of the millions of loyal Muslims in France, and barely concealed her fury. Turning directly to him, she said that it would take much more than what he had just assured us was the view of Muslims, given that in all the Muslim websites, in the Muslim “lieux de culte,” every day, over and over, threats against the blasphemers, that is such people as were murdered earlier today at Charlie-Hebdo, were expressed over and over, by clerics and believers alike.

If you want to find out about Amar Lasfar, Imam of Lille, one more smiling lying Muslim representative (there have been, there are, so many), you can start here.