

"They Don't Care If They Are Raped On The Roadside, But We Do"

The Saudi cleric justifies the ban on female drivers by noting that in America, women drivers expect to be raped, and that's okay, because it reflects American decadence. But Saudis, the most Muslim and therefore the most moral of peoples, won't allow women to be out on the road, driving, precisely because, given what beasts men are, they would, if not accompanied by a male driver, almost certainly be raped.

The story is nothing new. What is new is that it appears today on MSN News. And the most important detail in the story – here — is one I leave up to you to discover, and to post on in the comments section.
