

When the last Ukrainian soldier falls, Putin will come for you ladies and gents.

There are daily demonstrations outside the Russian embassy in London. The walls are covered in graffiti and it isn't complimentary.

The statue of St Volodymyr in Holland Park is bedecked with fresh flowers, many in shades of blue and yellow.

My husband was in Trafalgar Square today for the rally in support. These are a selection of his photographs.

The rally began with the Ukrainian national anthem and prayer led by Archbishop Claudio Gugerotti, the papal nuncio to Great Britain. I can't yet find out who the other priest definitely is, but he looks like Bishop Kenneth Nowakowski of the Ukrainian Catholic Cathedral of the Holy Family in London.
